

TheBlueprintDaily

Wireless Sales Script Bundle

Wireless Sales Script Bundle

7 Field-Tested Scripts for Commission Sales Reps

By Warren Davis | Cellular Sales — Verizon's #1 Authorized Retailer

Each script below is a proven, field-tested framework. Read it, internalize it, then make it yours. The goal is not to sound scripted — it's to never be caught off guard. The money is in the follow-up and the close.

SCRIPT 1 The Cold Walk-In Opener

Situation: Customer walks into the store browsing.

"Hey, welcome in! Just so you know — no pressure, take your look around. But if you've got 60 seconds I can show you something most people don't know about our current promos that could actually save you money on your bill. You interested?"

Why it works: You removed pressure, gave them control, and created curiosity. Most reps make the mistake of jumping straight to products. This script earns the right to the conversation first.

SCRIPT 2 The Bill Review Opener

Situation: Customer comes in to pay their bill or ask a question.

"While I pull that up — quick question, when's the last time someone actually reviewed your account to make sure you're on the right plan? I ask because most people are overpaying by $20-40 a month and don't know it. Takes two minutes — want me to check?"

Why it works: Reframes the interaction from a transaction to a service. Creates value before you've sold anything.

SCRIPT 3 The Trade-In Script

Situation: Customer has an old device, or you want to surface trade-in value.

"Before we go any further — do you have your current phone with you? The reason I ask is the trade-in values right now are the highest I've seen in two years. Most people think their old phone isn't worth much. I've had customers walk out with $400-600 credit they didn't expect. Let me run the numbers — takes 30 seconds and you lose nothing by knowing."

Why it works: Always say 'run the numbers' — it sounds analytical, not salesy. People trust numbers.

SCRIPT 4

The Add-A-Line Script

Situation: Customer is upgrading or paying their bill — explore adding a line.

"Quick question — is everyone in your household on this account, or do you have family members on a different carrier? I ask because right now when you add a line, you're actually bringing the cost per line down. So you'd be saving money per person and getting everyone on the same network. Is that something that would make sense for your family?"

Why it works: Flips the script — you're saving them money by adding a line. Positions you as a financial advisor, not a salesperson.

SCRIPT 5

The Protection Upsell

Situation: Customer just bought a new device.

"Last thing before you go — and I promise this is the last thing. Have you ever cracked a screen? [Wait for answer.] Screen replacements run $200-400 out of pocket. Our protection plan is [price]/month. Over a year that's [annual cost]. Most people do the math and realize it's not a question of if their phone gets damaged — it's when. Want me to add it for today?"

Why it works: Personal anecdote-style question creates relatability. The math comparison does the selling.

SCRIPT 6

The Competitor Handle

Situation: Customer says they're with or considering a competitor.

"Makes sense — they've got good marketing. What made you pick them originally? I ask because most people don't know what Verizon's network actually covers versus what they're on now. Coverage is everything in wireless — especially if you travel or work outside the city. Want me to pull up a side-by-side comparison? Takes 60 seconds and you'll know exactly where you stand."

Why it works: Never trash the competitor — compare the network. Coverage is objective, and Verizon wins most coverage comparisons.

SCRIPT 7

The Follow-Up Text (24 hrs after no sale)

Situation: Send within 24 hours of a customer leaving without buying.

"Hey [Name], it's [Your Name] from [Store]. Just wanted to follow up — I know you were looking at [product/plan] yesterday. That promotion is still available through [date], and I wanted to make sure you had everything you needed to make a decision. Happy to answer any questions. No pressure — just want to make sure you don't miss out if it was the right fit."

Why it works: Most sales happen on the 2nd-5th contact. This text is warm, not pushy, and creates a deadline without inventing one.

QUICK COMEBACK GUIDE — Handle These in 10 Seconds

"I'm just looking."	"Perfect — no pressure. I'll be right here. If you see anything you want to know more about, just wave me down."
"I need to think about it."	"Of course. What's the one thing you're most unsure about? Let me answer that right now so it doesn't slow you down."
"I'm with [competitor]."	"Makes sense. What made you pick them originally? Coverage is everything — want me to do a quick comparison?"

"I have to ask my spouse."	"Of course. What if I set it up so all your spouse has to do is say yes? That way you're not making another trip."
"I'll just go online."	"You can — and if you do, use my rep code so it gets credited. But the in-store promos don't always match online. Let me check if I can throw anything extra in before you go."

The best script is the one you've internalized. Practice it until it sounds like you — then use it every single day.
