25 Word-for-Word Responses to the Most Common Sales Objections

INTRODUCTION

Every objection is a question in disguise. “It’s too expensive” really means “I don’t yet see the value.” “I need to think about it” really means “I’m not confident enough yet.” Your job isn’t to argue — it’s to answer the real question underneath.

This guide gives you 25 proven, field-tested responses. For each objection you’ll get: - The real meaning behind it - Word-for-word language to use - A follow-up line to move toward the close

SECTION 1: PRICE OBJECTIONS

Objection 1: “It’s too expensive.”

Real meaning: “I don’t see enough value yet.” Response: > “I completely understand. Can I ask — expensive compared to what? Because when you look at what’s included [list key value], most people find it’s actually a strong deal for what you’re getting.” Follow-up: “What would make the price feel right to you?”

Objection 2: “I can get it cheaper somewhere else.”

Real meaning: “Convince me why you’re worth it.” Response: > “You’re probably right — you can find cheaper. But cheaper and better value aren’t always the same thing. What matters to you most — the lowest price, or the best experience?” Follow-up: “Let me show you exactly what sets this apart.”

Objection 3: “I don’t have the budget right now.”

Real meaning: “It’s not a priority yet” or “I need a payment option.” Response: > “I hear you. Would it help if we looked at a monthly option that makes this easier on your budget? Sometimes that changes the conversation completely.” Follow-up: “What would a comfortable monthly number look like for you?”

Objection 4: “That’s more than I wanted to spend.”

Real meaning: “Anchor me back to a lower number.” Response: > “That’s fair — I want to work within what makes sense for you. Let me see what I can do. If I can get this closer to [their number], would you be ready to move forward today?”

Objection 5: “I can wait until the price drops.”

Real meaning: “I’m not in a rush.” Response: > “That’s a reasonable thought. The tricky part is [current promo / deal / trade-in value] is only available through [timeframe]. If the price doesn’t drop but this offer expires, you’d actually end up paying more by waiting.”

SECTION 2: TIMING OBJECTIONS

Objection 6: “I need to think about it.”

Real meaning: “I’m not confident enough yet.” Response: > “Of course — and I want you to feel good about this. What’s the main thing you’re turning over in your mind? If I can answer it now, I want to save you the back-and-forth.”

Objection 7: “I’m not ready yet.”

Real meaning: “I don’t feel urgency.” Response: > “Totally fine. Can I ask what ‘ready’ looks like for you? I want to make sure when you are ready, you get the best possible deal — and some of these don’t stick around.”

Objection 8: “I’ll come back later / next week.”

Real meaning: “I’m not feeling enough pull to decide now.” Response: > “I’d love to hold this for you. Here’s the thing though — [this promo / this inventory / this pricing] may not be here when you come back. Is there anything I can do to make this decision easier today?”

Objection 9: “It’s not a good time.”

Real meaning: “There’s a real constraint — respect it.” Response: > “No problem at all. When would be a better time? I’ll follow up then — I don’t want to lose touch because the timing was off.”

Objection 10: “I want to do more research.”

Real meaning: “I don’t feel informed enough.” Response: > “Smart move — you should feel informed. What are the top 2 or 3 things you want to research? I might be able to answer them right now and save you the time.”

SECTION 3: AUTHORITY OBJECTIONS

Objection 11: “I need to talk to my spouse/partner.”

Real meaning: “I don’t want to make this call alone.” Response: > “Of course — this is a joint decision. What if I set everything up so all your spouse has to do is say yes? That way you’re not making another trip. What do you think they’ll want to know?”

Objection 12: “My boss has to approve it.”

Real meaning: “I need something to show decision-makers.” Response: > “That makes sense. Let me put together a summary for you — the breakdown, the ROI, the value — so you can walk in with everything they need. That way you’re not doing the selling, the numbers are.”

Objection 13: “It’s not my decision.”

Real meaning: “I’m not the buyer.” Response: > “Totally understand. Who is the decision-maker? Would it help if I talked to them directly, or would you prefer I put something together that you can pass along?”

SECTION 4: TRUST/SKEPTICISM OBJECTIONS

Objection 14: “I’ve had bad experiences before.”

Real meaning: “I need you to rebuild trust.” Response: > “That’s fair — and I’m sorry that happened. Can I ask what went wrong? Because I want to make sure whatever tripped you up before doesn’t happen with us. That matters to me.”

Objection 15: “I don’t know if I can trust this.”

Real meaning: “Show me proof.” Response: > “I respect that. What would help you feel more confident? Reviews, a walkthrough, a comparison — whatever it takes to get you comfortable, I want to do that.”

Objection 16: “That sounds too good to be true.”

Real meaning: “Where’s the catch?” Response: > “I totally get that — good deals sound suspicious. Let me walk you through exactly how it works, line by line, so there’s no surprise. Sound fair?”

Objection 17: “I’ve seen better deals online.”

Real meaning: “Match it or beat it.” Response: > “Pull it up — I’d love to see it. Sometimes online deals have hidden fees or don’t include what we offer in-store. Let’s compare apples to apples.”

SECTION 5: COMPETITOR OBJECTIONS

Objection 18: “I’m happy with my current provider.”

Real meaning: “Give me a reason to switch.” Response: > “That’s great — loyalty matters. I’m curious though, when did you last actually compare? Because the gap between carriers has changed a lot in the last year. Would it hurt to know what you’re missing?”

Objection 19: “I’ve been with [Competitor] for years.”

Real meaning: “I’m comfortable and change is uncomfortable.” Response: > “That loyalty says a lot about you. Here’s my question — have they rewarded that loyalty? Because we actually take care of long-term customers differently. Let me show you what that looks like.”

Objection 20: “My whole family is on [Competitor].”

Real meaning: “Switching feels complicated.” Response: > “That’s actually easier to solve than you think. We handle the switch for you — number transfers, everything. And bringing everyone over usually saves money per line. Want me to run the numbers?”

SECTION 6: PRODUCT/FIT OBJECTIONS

Objection 21: “I don’t need all those features.”

Real meaning: “Simplify it for me.” Response: > “Fair enough. Let me strip it down to just what you need. Which features matter most to you? We’ll build from there.”

Objection 22: “This isn’t exactly what I was looking for.”

Real meaning: “I haven’t found the right fit yet.” Response: > “Tell me more about what you had in mind. I’d rather find you exactly the right thing than close a deal that doesn’t work for you — that’s how I get referrals.”

Objection 23: “I don’t use my phone that much.”

Real meaning: “I don’t see value in upgrading.” Response: > “That’s actually a great sign — it means you’re probably overpaying for what you’re using. Let me look at your usage and find you something that fits better. You might even save money.”

Objection 24: “I already have something that works.”

Real meaning: “Change feels risky.” Response: > “If it works, that’s what matters. But ‘works’ and ‘optimal’ are different things. Can I show you what an upgrade would actually look like — and you decide if it’s worth it?”

Objection 25: “I just don’t see the value.”

Real meaning: “I need a clearer picture of the benefit.” Response: > “That’s on me — let me try again. The value isn’t in [feature], it’s in [outcome for them]. What matters most to you is [X], and this solves exactly that. Does that land differently?”

CLOSING REMINDER

The best objection handler is a great discovery conversation. Ask questions before pitching. Understand what they care about. Then every objection becomes easy — because you already know what matters to them.
